I was prompted by a teacher to enter since I am very fond of creating art. After some thought I figured that making art for a good cause wouldn't hurt. Overall, I enjoyed the process and even more so enjoyed the experience.

Comparing yourself to others doesn't lead to much. The title references the saying "Don't compare apples to oranges" which I've often had to repeat to myself over the years. I've depicted the fruits as both rotting, representing two people who are struggling yet comparing themselves to the other.
