I believe that grief is a strong emotion. One that can really take a toll on people. So I decided to create a short film based on how grief can affect people.

This short film is about two friends who are back at an old bench. They talk and relive the moments that they used to have in this same spot. Throughout the film Atulith expresses and shows how the grief has gotten to him. He begins to get frustrated, and then apologize. Then at the end it is revealed that Vince was never really there to begin with. Someone comes in at the end to fill his spot that is missing. The Black Screen at the end of the film while the voice over is happening, is supposed to be a time of reflection. You can see yourself in the reflection as the last message is given to you.
